Paulson Fontaine Press is pleased to announce three new editions: Snaggletooth by Mary Lee Bendolph and Equal Justice and Stacked Bricks by Essie Bendolph Pettway. Mary Lee and Essie are mother and daughter who embody the generational tradition of quilt making which has been passed down and flourished in Gee's Bend for the past 150 years. This is Mary Lee's fourteenth edition with the press since 2005, and this is our first project with Essie.

Paulson Fontaine Press will donate 15% of our proceeds from the sale of these editions to The Equal Justice Initiative, a non-profit organization based in Montgomery, Alabama, which provides legal representation to prisoners who may have been wrongly convicted of crimes, to poor prisoners without effective representation, and to others who may have been denied a fair trial.

Pettway’s vibrant composition of violets and blues, Equal Justice, is a riff on the traditional housetop block quilt design. Divided into four quadrants, each distinctly patterned block activates around the central fulcrum, a single swatch of bright yellow. In Stacked Bricks, Pettway finds inspiration in the facade of the Southern Poverty Law Center, an iconic symbol of justice also located in Montgomery, Alabama.

Bendolph’s Snaggletooth is packed with energy and color. Repurposed thrift store clothing is arranged into a lively composition that is the visual equivalent of jazz. Lines of small irregular squares anchored amid larger strips of black, tan, red, white and violet are reminiscent of both piano keys and uneven rows of teeth.

Matriarch quilt maker, Mary Lee Bendolph (born 1935), descends from generations of accomplished quilt makers in Gee’s Bend, Alabama. Bendolph was one of many from Gee’s Bend who accompanied Martin Luther King, Jr. in his march at Camden, Alabama in 1965. In 1999, she was profiled in a Los Angeles Times Pulitzer Prize–winning article, “Crossing Over: Mary Lee's Vision.” Her quilt making style marries a flair for improvisation to traditional construction techniques that emphasize rectangles and squares. Her small compositions of cloth build to create complicated compositions that occasionally contain humorous touches and autobiographical references.

Essie Bendolph Pettway (born 1956), the only daughter of Mary Lee Bendolph, began quilting at the age of eight. Although trained by her mother, Essie developed a distinctive style and was producing accomplished quilts while still in her teens. She has worked for many years making uniforms for the armed forces. Her highly practiced sewing skills enable her to tackle complex quilt patterns and introduce subtle optical effects into them. Over the years, she also has created a number of quilts that incorporate camouflage patterns from her day job. Essie is among the last women in Gee’s Bend to continue practicing her craft.

Both quilter’s works have traveled extensively in museum and gallery exhibitions, including The Quilts of Gee’s Bend, Gee’s Bend: The Architecture of the Quilt, and Mary Lee Bendolph, Gee’s Bend Quilts, and Beyond.
